

A found poem for National Poetry Day

Posted At : October 9, 2008 4:57 PM | Posted By : Helen Vincent

Related Categories: general

Beside our Literature case is a 'wall of words', consisting of quotations from some of the writers it contains. Here, for National Poetry Day, is that wall. I'll put an edited version with the sources in a comment below.

Auld Scotland has a raucle tongue,
She's just a devil wi' a rung;
An' if she promise auld or young
To tak their part,
Tho' by the neck she should be strung,
She'll no desert.

To speak in the poetical language of my country, the seat of the Celtic Muse is in the mist of the secret and solitary hill, and her voice in the murmur of the mountain stream.

A pale green light poured down from the wintry sky, as though this earth were lit by chance rays from some other world.

'He canny help his feet. At least he's no' a wee Glasgow bauchle like you.'

'Aye, all right, I'd rather be A Glasgow bauchle than a drip like him.'

What they had was not love.
But it had beauty, and it served.

And there was the bridal bed, pulled out from the wall, all in white it was, with sheet and blanket turned back, the window curtains were drawn, and in the moment they stood breathing from their climb of the stairs Chris heard the sound of the snow that stroked the window, with quiet, soft fingers, as though writing it there.

Oh my luve is like a red red rose That's newly sprung in June

They gazed with blanched faces at the House with the Green Shutters, sitting dark there and terrible, beneath the radiant arch of the dawn.

Thus were we all throng'd in so strait a cage,
I chang'd my looks and hair, before my age, Dreaming on liberty (by strong desire My soul made apt to hope) and did admire
Those gallant mindes, enslav'd to such a woe, (My heart within my brest dissolv'd like snow Before the Sunne) as one would side-wayes cast
His eye on pictures, which his feet hath past.

They won't let ye dae it. They won't let ye dae it,
because it's seen
as ah sign ay thir ain failure.
The fact that ye jist simply choose tae reject whit they huv to offer.
Choose us.
Choose life.

and there is that transient brightness of a minute blossom almost invisible in the undergrowth, uniquely recognisable by such as persist in the quest, but unlisted in any index or encyclopaedia of the possible.

Fra that I saw that God was gane,
And I in languor left allane,
And sair tormentit to:
Sum time I sicht quhill I was sad,
Sum tyme I musit and maist gane mad,
I wist not quhat to do:
Sum tyme I ravid half in a rage,
As ane into dispaire:

To be opprest with sic ane page
Lord gif my heart was faire:
Like Dido, Cupido,
I widill and I warye:
Quha reft me, and left me
In sik a feire-farye.

I love to muse upon the skill that gangs
To mak' the simplest thing that Earth displays.
The eident life that ilka atom thrangs,
And uses it in the appointit ways,
And a' the endless brain that nocht escapes
That myriad moves them to inimitable shapes.

Yes today we're in love aren't we?
with the whole splintering city its big quick river wintry bridges its brazen black Victorian heart.
So what if every other tenement wears its hearth on its gable end all I want is my glad eye to catch a glint in your flinty Northern face again just once.

Cha chiumhne leam do bhriathran, eadhon ni a thubhairt thu, ach abhainn Aros an àileadh iadhshlait is àileadh roid air Suidhisnis.

I do not remember your words, even a thing you said, but Aros Burn in the smell of honey-suckle and the smell of bog-myrtle on Suishnish.